Republican U.S. Senate Candidate John Rust Launches TV and Radio Ads Across Indiana

Hits Jim Banks on being an establishment insider

Seymour, Indiana - On Tuesday, Republican candidate for the US Senate in Indiana John Rust launched TV and radio ads statewide. The TV ad, titled "Stooge," sheds light on the damage career politicians like Joe Biden, Mitch McConnell, and Nancy Pelosi are having on the nation. Jim Banks has proven himself to be a Mitch McConnell loyalist, and is relying on the insider machine to keep John Rust off the ballot and placed in the Senate. There is no doubt that Jim Banks is Mitch McConnell's handpicked stooge.

These ads come on the heels of a lawsuit John Rust filed in September to get on the May Primary ballot. It also comes just weeks after Jim Banks tweeted about working with Mitch McConnell in the Senate - on the very same day that McConnell froze on camera once again.

"It's been clear from the beginning that Jim Banks is Mitch McConnell's hand picked candidate. They have been doing everything in their power to ensure that Hoosiers don't have a choice in the Republican Primary. That's why they are fighting so hard to keep me off the ballot and mobilize the establishment to push Jim Banks into the Senate. Our nation is facing too many critical issues to just let another career politician jump from the House to the Senate. Indiana deserves a Senator that's working for them, not Mitch McConnell."

John Rust concluded by asking this question: "If elected, is Jim Banks going to vote for Mitch McConnell to remain the GOP leader in the Senate? I've been waiting for an answer on this, but there's been nothing but silence from Jim Banks."
